This piece of work began as parish register transcription with a local history course in Long Buckby in the winter of 1970-1, promoted by the University of Leicester Department of Adult Education and the Workers' Educational Association.

The following people took part in the work of transcribing the register from Xerox copies of its pages:

Mrs M D Ball	Mrs I M Dexter	Mr R Newitt
Mr A Beddard	Mr I R Dexter	Mrs E L A Newitt
Mrs J M Brewer	Mr G Evans	Miss H C Samman
Mr H G Clifton	Mrs A Garratt	Mrs G L Sharpe
Mrs D H Coles	Mrs M J Hall	Mrs J Thompson
Miss R Collins	Mrs M J Hillier	Miss G M E Townsend
Mrs H Collins	Mr S Holland	Mr R A Watson
Miss K Cooke	Mrs K M Holland	Mrs J E Wright
Mrs D M Cooper	Mrs M A Johnson
Mrs G B Cooper	Mrs J M Jones

The work could not have been carried out without the kind permission of the Reverend J M Courtenay, Vicar of Long Buckby, who entrusted his oldest register to the tutor, and allowed its pages to be copied for class use.

The task of checking the transcripts, and editing the work was done by the tutor of the course, who wishes to acknowledge the debt he owes to his wife, to Miss P A Perkins of the University Centre, Northampton, and to the clerical staff of the Department of Adult Education at the University, for their assistance in producing the work in this form.

Introduction

Long Buckby in this Period

In a survey of the Manor of Long Buckby made for the Duchy of Lancaster in 1591, the place was described as 'being neere three millnes east from Daventree in a very good ayre and good arrable land to the same ap[per]teyning and other necessary grounds for the depasturing of their sheepe and cattell'[1] The survey goes on to give a picture of a community of small peasant farmers and cottagers. It lists the names and holdings of five freeholders and forty-two tenant farmers, usually with a garden or orchard, a close, rarely more than one yardland[2] in the open fields, and with rights of pasture on the common and heath. In addition to the occupiers of the two water mills, the common bakehouse and the proprietor of a windmill erected 'neerabouts 12 years last ... by what right they know not,' the sworn jury also listed for the Duchy surveyor some twenty cottagers, some with gardens or closes, but without other land. The survey also drew attention to details of recent encroachments 'upon her Ma[jestie]s wast' and made the comment that 'the inhabitants thereof seeme to be very poore'

It is clear that the character of the community of Long Buckby was formed, partly at any rate, by the presence in the parish of one of the few heaths in Northamptonshire, a fertile county with very little waste land in it. The Northamptonshire Heaths, noted John Morton, about the year 1712, 'Are not without their Commodities and Use; as affording not only a fewel for the poorer Sort of People, that is, the Sod or Turf with the Heath or Ling upon it ... but also Furze, and Broom in some Places, and Fern or Brakes, a very good sort of Firing for the Bakers, and very proper for the burning of Lime ... And which is also of good Use in shading and sheltering the Grass underneath, which otherwise would be burnt up by the Sun. It yields a sweet and cleanly Herbage, wich feeds a breed of small Sheep, whose Flesh is usually much commended and Esteemed. The Sheep upon the Heaths, particularly those at West Haddon are observ'd to escape even in the most fatal Seasons, when the Sheep of other Places generally fall. And in those Lordships which have both low Ground and Heath, as Long-Buckby: to remove their sheep from the former to the latter is found a good Preservative in such Seasons'. He also observes that 'these also are the Places for Warrens; as consisting of such a lax and dry Earth as the Rabbets delight to burrow in, and affording a Herbage peculiarly fit for them'.[1] In the seventeenth century there was a large enclosed warren on Buckby and East Haddon Heath[2], which in 1591 was held by Sir Christopher Hatton on a fifty-year lease,[3] and Bridges, the county historian, writing about 1720 mentions that 'upon the heath is a large open warren: and an inclosed one was destroyed some years ago' The heath then, afforded a living to poor cottagers, and had probably done so from the Middle Ages. As early as 1324 an Inquisition Post Mortem refers to 'Cotton' and the more familiar 'Cotton end' is mentioned in 1544.[4] It was the gradual building of cottages along the road out of the village towards Northampton, meeting up with the cluster of squatters cottages at 'cotton end', on the very edge of the heath, that was responsible for Buckby coming to be known as Long Buckby. The earliest located documentary reference to Long Buckby is in the will of Elyn Line of 1521. What few sources for the village in the fifteenth century there are, refer to it simply as 'Buckby'.

When we come to look for factors which might be responsible for driving people from the neighbourhood into the parish in this period, they are not far to seek. Professor Beresford lists a number of villages very close by, which were depopulated to make sheep runs, and for other reasons, about this time. In 1488, for instance, thirty-six people were expelled from Newbottle, in 1491 the Priory at Catesby evicted sixty persons, in 1498 one hundred people were turned out of Thrupp in the very next parish of Norton, and a year later, thirty were expelled from Potcote in Cold Higham.[1] Some of these at least, must have sought a living in Buckby.

Long Buckby, a decayed medieval market town, was, by the end of Queen Elizabeth's reign, an 'open' village. It had no squire, the occupation of land was in small parcels, and it had a big heath on the high ground above the village affording a living to poor cottagers. In the eighteenth century a woolcombing industry grew up in the village, having its origins in the last years of the seventeenth century, to give employment to the large body of labourers, but the character of Buckby as an 'open' village persisted. And even today the one-inch ordnance survey map shows it as a park-less parish surrounded by parishes liberally dotted with country houses set in their own enclosed grounds.

The Vicars of Long Buckby and their Register 1598 to 1689

In the year 1538 Thomas Cromwell instructed incumbents to record the baptisms, marriages and burials of their parishioners. Cromwell's requirements were imperfectly carried out. Accordingly, under a provincial constitution of Canterbury of 25 October 1597, approved by the Queen in 1598, it was ordered that parchment registers be purchased by each parish and that all names from the older registers should be copied into them from the beginning, but 'especially so since the first year of her Majesties' reign'. Page one of our register shows clearly that the purchase of a book for Long Buckby was duly made, but Thomas Bradshawe, the vicar in 1598, like so many incumbents, began his transcription in 1558, complying with the last part of the injunction only.

It would seem that, by 1593, some of the old paper registers had been lost, for the first entries record only marriages down to 1570. It is also apparent that the entries covering the years 1570 to 1583 are missing, and perhaps were missing in 1598 at the time of Bradshawe's transcription. The information recorded here starts in a detailed way only in 1583, in which year there seems to have been an epidemic in Buckby, which claimed amongst others, the vicar, Thomas Wapell, and his family. Bridges tell us that Thomas Bradshawe became vicar in 1587. If this is correct and there was an incumbent between Wapell and Bradshawe, the register makes no mention of him. The copying of the retrospective entries into the register took fifteen pages, Bradshawe signing each page and the two churchwardens (presumably) making their marks as witnesses. From 1598 Bradshawe no longer signs at the foot of the page, and also begins the useful practice of indicating the year, as well as the month and day, by the side of each entry. Bradshawe kept the register efficiently until 1611 when his handwriting abruptly ceases, presumably because he left or died. Bridges does not list a vicar between Thomas Bradshawe and Richard Winter, vicar from 1620, though Henry Ishan Longden in his Northamtonshire and Rutland Clergy from 1500 asserts that Bradshawe was succeeded by his son, also Thomas, in the living.[1] If this is so, the younger Bradshawe totally neglected his register, for there are no entries between 1611 and 1620.

For eight years Winter was vicar. His burial is recorded on page 46 of the register, the date and the entry being March 11, 1629. He was succeeded by Thomas Dowsing, a young man who had taken his bachelor's degree at Cambridge in 1625/6[2] He was, from the evidence of the handwriting of the register, vicar until 1641.

The register contains no entries, save for one or two retrospective ones by the Cromwellian Register, for the years of the Great Rebellion, 1641 - 1652.

There are a few indications, from other sources, that Long Buckby was perhaps a centre of puritanism in this troubled period. In 1637 there was an incident over non-payment of ship money there,[3] and in the same year the inquiry into 'The State of the Church' in the Diocese contained in its report on Long Buckby Church the following statement 'Sandersons Sermons and one Mr Byfeilds works upon the Creed chained up as records of ye Church w[hi]ch are not required and we contemd that the same are not fitt to be used as rather tendinge to faccon then edificacon', presumably because they had puritan tendencies.[4]

On page 74, well out of chronological context, there is a listing of inhabitants dating from the year 1642. The names of 204 men, grouped together by christian names are given.

4 The full report is included as an appendix at the end of the register.

Someone has carefully scratched out the heading to the list, leaving only the date 'Feb. 13 1641' and a name next to the date that is still legible, 'Thomas Andrew Inc:'. It is unlikely that this is a list of Easter Communicants, the date and the sexual exclusiveness being wrong. It is very probably the 'Protestation Return' of 1642 by which all men were require to take an oath that they accepted the protestant religion of the country. If it is, then it is a doubly useful source of information. Firstly, because it gives a figure that can be compared with others for the calculation of the population of the village in the seventeenth century[1], and secondly because it is the only form in which the Protestation Return has survived, neither the House of Lords Record Office, nor the Diocesan records, having a copy of the Northamptonshire Returns.

A brief view of the village in the Civil War is given in a letter from Nehemiah Wharton, a subaltern in the army of London Volunteers, to Mr George Willingham, a London merchant in 1642. They had marched over Dunsmoor Heath to Barby in Northamptonshire where 'our soldiers pillaged the parson of the town, and brought him away prisoner, with his surplice and other relics. From hence we marched four miles further into Longe Bugby, where we had very hard quarter, insomuch that many of our captaines could get no lodginge, and our soildiers were glad to dispossesse the very swine, and as many as could quartered in the church .... This towne hath, for two Sundays together, bin so abused by the rebels, that both men, women and children were glad to leave the towne and hide themselves in ditches and corn fields.'[2] Buckby was, of course, uncomfortably close to both parliamentarian Northampton and the King's house, Holdenby.

The intruding minister in the 1640s was Robert Kilsby. Whether or not he immediately took over from Dowsing is not certain. The earliest mention of him in the register is November 14 1654 when he was married. In 1646 the living was augmented by £50 from the impropriated tithe of Long Buckby, sequestrated from Sir Robert Hatton, delinquent. The minister however is not mentioned.[1] In 1652 this was again orderd to be carried out, and the intruding minister was named as Kilsby. In 1649, it was reported that the 'ancient means' belonging to the Minister was £10 and a dwelling house, but was added to by augmentations of £70 more. Mr Kilsby again was the minister.[2] At frequent intervals after his marriage in 1654 his children were baptised and, as frequently buried.

In the 1650s two Cromwellian Registers were appointed to record births, marriages and burials. These were Thomas Barber 1653-58, and Richard Tebbitt 1658-62.

Kilsby was succeeded by Robert Hutton, but we do not know the date. Whether Kilsby was ejected or not in 1662 is unclear. Certainly he is not numbered amongst the ejected ministers in Northamptonshire who became the first heroes of Nonconformity. It may be that he conformed or perhaps died at or before the time of testing in 1662. There is an entry in the register of the burial of his widow on June 12 1663. The register records the marriage of Hutton (June 24 1664) but apart from this he remains a shadowy figure. He was succeeded by Job Grace, whose marriage is recorded in the register, on May 27 1668. Grace was succeeded in 1680 by John Sandford who was minister for forty years, being buried 28 March 1720.

The Cromwellian Registers seem to have done their job reasonably well if, in the case of Barber, somewhat untidily. Thereafter the register becomes rather unkempt, until Sandford became vicar, and kept it in a more orderly fashion.

The Editing of the Register

The objectives in preparing this edition of the Long Buckby register are threefold. To provide a source for Long Buckby history in the Tudor and Stuart period, a text useful to demographers, and a tool for genealogists. For each or all of these objectives it was not necessary to make a full transcription of the original, as this would have involved the inclusion of much repetitive and irrelevant material. The aim has been to produce an accurate text readily usable for the reader wanting to distinguish names, relationships, and births, marriages and burials, quickly and precisely, and at the same time to include other material of interest to the students of Long Buckby and Northamptonshire history.

To provide an edition useful for these purposes, we have generally followed the pattern suggested by P.M. Tillott in the Amateur Historian in 1967.[1]

The first thing to be done was to number the pages of the register, with the permission of the vicar, from 1 to 110, taking one page to equal one side of a sheet in the register. The page number appears in square brackets in the top left-hand corner of each page above the date column.

The form of arrangement, except for a brief period in the Interregnum when births instead of baptisms were recorded, is to use 'Baptisms', 'Marriages' and 'Burials' regardless of what form of language was used in the original. Under these headings all material describing the class of registration is omitted, for example, in the case of busials such terms as 'was buried' and 'sepult', etc, are left out. Where headings, or parts of headings, are enclosed in square brackets, they have been put in by the editor. Those without square brackets are in the original register.

1 'Transcribing Parish Registers', Vol 7, No.5, 1967, pp 138-145

With regard to dates, the year of registration is transcribed across the middle of thecpage regardless of the form of the original. One of the difficulties here is that up to 1751 it was the custom to regard the year as beginning on Lady Day, the Annunciation, 25 March. In this edition, therefore, dates between 1 January and 24 March have both the old and the new form eg, '23 January 1588' is given as 'Jan 23 1588/9'.

Regardless of the form the entry took in the register, the form we use in this edition is the month (abbreviated) followed by the date in arabic numerals. For example 'the xvj daye of Apprell' is given as 'Apr 16'. For more than one date in the same month the name of the month is only given with the first one. The form 'the same day' or its Latin equivalent 'eodem die' is transcribed by simply repeating the date. Such usages as 'anno predicto' are ignored altogether. Occasionally, when the register itself does so, or the entry is of particular interest, a departure is made from this form and the full transcription is given, as, for example, the entry recording the birth of Thomas Bradshawe's son on page 10.

At the same time as generally abbreviating the text of the register to make it more readily manageable, the practice of expanding abbreviations is also adopted. This mainly involves names, especially christian names. All names not abbreviated in the register are transcribed exactly. Neither of these practices concerning names raised many problems. Where there is a difficulty about deciding what the shortened form was in full, the text of the original has been given eg '[illegible]s Cho' Hoppas & Elizabeth' (Feb 18 1665/6, page 80).

In this work one common practice has been modified with with regard to names. This editor sees no virtue whatsoever in giving the Latin form of the names of Englishmen in an edition of their parish register, therefore such forms as 'Henricus', 'Johannis', or 'Ricardus' are given as 'Henry', 'John', and 'Richard'. In the case of wholly or partly latinized entries (which are a minority in this register anyway), obvious names are anglicized, but to show that Latin was used 'f' for 'filius' or 'filia' is retained. If full entries, as opposed to odd names, have been translated, this is indicated in a footnote. All this is not a big problem. Very little of the register is in Latin, and where it is the several vicars generally used an easily comprehensible mixture of Latin and English.

Where place names occur they are transcribed as in the original, sometimes with their modern form alongside in square brackets if they seem at all obscure, eg 'Crithon[Creaton]', page 80.

Where supplementary information of any kind is given in the original it is transcribed in full in this edition.

Where editorial insertions are made they are always enclosed in square brackets.

Where two entries are given in a single line in the original, they are transcribed in two entries and a footnote indicates this.

Entries out of date order are transcribed in the order they appear in the register.

Omissions are shown by the form [blank] and illegible entries by [illegible].

Abbreviations used in the text:

the son of = s	filia, filius = f [spelt out in full if there is doubt about the sex of the child or its name]
the daughter of = d	and/et = &
the wife of = wf	vidue, vidua = vid

All attempts to edit a parish register in the way it has been done here, abbreviating the form of the entries, and also expanding abbreviations, raise the problem of making the process readily apparent to the reader who has no access to the original. It is hoped that there is sufficient editorial indication given here to make clear just what has been done with the text of the Long Buckby parish register 1558 - 1689.

1 Page 10 is headed 'Anno Domini 1590' and below it is 'Baptisati'. It seems likely, however, that the first five entries are 1589 baptisms.

2 The date has been altered by Bradshawe from '1589' to '1590'. We have accepted this, but 1589 might conceivably be correct.

Burials 160[3] [1]

1 The heading in the register is 'Burialls Anno 1602' though the majority of the entries are for 1603. Each entry in this part of the register has the year as well as the day and month, and three entries marked *on p 24 are clearly 1602. However, from the chronology and the context it is just possible that this is an error and they are 1603.

The State of the Church 1637[1]

Bugby Longa

The pulpitt is thought to stand uery unfittingly and darke and to be remoued to the North pillar of the Church and the ministers seate placed under it The ministers seate where it now standeth is old undecent and too high

Sandersons sermons and one Mr Byfeilds works upon the Creed chained up as records of ye church w[hi]ch are not required and wee contemd that the same are not fitt to be used as rather tendinge to faccon then edificacon

The co[mmun]ion table is not cancelld in The table old and undecent and the charpet and lyning cloath old and torne

The seats in the chancell and South Ile broken and not fitting the house of God

The South doore comeing into the South Ile broken and undecent

The pauem[en]t of the Church Chancell and South Ile very defective and the windowes stopped up w[it]h stones at the bottom

The couer ouer the pulpit too letle

The bottomes of the seats broken in diuers places

The church yard mounds on the North side are too lowe And the mounds on the East side quite taken away. And the p[ar]ticon in in the east end of the Church where the kings armes are pasishend uery undecent towards the chancell and soe likewise in the North and South Ile

There wants a plate for the holy bread and flaggons wanting for the number of the co[mmun]icants The challice couer is broken and not decently kept
